

Create a Wrestler

Contributed by Jeff
 Tuesday, 02 May 2006
 Last Updated Monday, 28 May 2007

Lately, one of my favorite video games has been WWE Smackdown Vs. Raw 2006, not because I like the game play - I can't stand the actual wrestling part - but because of the Create a Wrestler mode. Sure, it's missing a few items that would make it truly kick ass, but it's still a hell of a lot of fun.

Here are a few of the wrestlers I have created. The ones that don't really really suck.

This is by far one of the best. The only real problem is the belt, but it's close enough. If you're an idiot and can't tell, it's The Flash. This one has a few problems. The face burns aren't right. and the colors on the sweater are off. He has knife gloves on both hands, but with the way the game works it was either both hands or no knife glove at all, so I went with both hands. Now if the game only had a decent hockey mask, we could make a kick-ass remake of that movie. I really like this one. It's an average Superman at best, but here's the cool part. When he first enters the arena he is dressed as Clark Kent, but changes into Superman for the actual match. Oh yeah, and no capes in this game. I tried the same gimmick on the Hulk, but he looks really bad as Bruce Banner. Oh well, at least the Hulk looks good. Bat-Man. Not that great. You can't tell from this angle, but the ears on his cowl are messed up. And his emblem is pretty horrible. Average Captain America. The mask is way off, but the rest is decent. He-Man. Wow, those arms are horrible. Hair isn't right either. Had to use a helmet for Skeletor. No hoods in this game. Otherwise, I'm very pleased with this guy. Marv from Sin City. He looks really short, but he is actually just really wide. Well, that's all I've got. Or at least all you are gonna see. --Jeff {mos_fb_discuss:3}